Modern Joseph Shames Russia

Even as Pharaoh, first persecutor of the Jews, called upon Joseph, a Jew, when he and his people were in dire trouble, the czar of Russia called upon a Jewish physician to save the life of the czarévitch. Russian surgical skill could not have accomplished the delicate operation. The best surgeons of the czar's domains diagnosed the case accurately, but none of them dared use the knife. It was necessary for the head of the ruling house of Russia to send for Dr. Israel, a Jewish physician in Berlin.

The czar was forced to place the life of the heir to the throne of the Romanoffs in the hands of a leader of the people who had been persecuted for centuries with the silent consent of the ruling house of Russia. Because of the hatred which the Russians have held for the Jews, it was necessary for the czar to issue a special edict to permit the only man who could save his son to come to St. Petersburg. All laws were set aside in this extremity.

Only the Jewish surgeon was competent and possessed the confidence in his ability to wield the knife on the stricken child. He took not only his own life and reputation in his hands and staked them on the result, but the cause of his people. Had his judgment erred he would not only have forfeited life and reputation, but he would have made the lot of his people in Russia even harder. It was a dramatic situation in real life, stranger and more impressive than any in fiction.

Like Joseph, Dr. Israel demanded a boon for his people. Before he would consent to perform the operation he exacted a promise from the czar that the order prohibiting the settlement of Jews at Odessa and Kief would be rescinded. He staked the happiness of his people, which he considered above his own life, on his surgical skill, and he won for them. It remains to be seen whether the Russian Pharaoh will keep his word on continue to the last to hold hatred for the Jews.

Russia, of all the nations today, is the only country so benighted as to preserve the century-old religious hatred. It is a fitting rebuke of this savage folly that the czar of the Russians should be forced to call upon one of the persecuted race in the greatest trouble that could befall him as a man and as a monarch. Surely, now he should heed the warning, which was given unto Pharaoh centuries ago, that he should let the children of Israel go.

Advice For Law Makers

Every newspaper in the state has been devoting editorial space since the election in tendering advice to the newly-made lawmakers. The advice, in many instances, is good, but it is a doubtful matter to predict if it will be followed by the solons after they gather in their law making sessions.

Of the entire membership of the assembly this year not more than a half dozen have had experience in the legislature. It will be the duty of the few to educate their colleagues and after a month or six weeks is spent in this pleasant pastime the body will get down to real work. The remaining two weeks of the session will witness the passage of many bills, the contents of which no one except the author is aware. Through this practice many laws are enacted that remain unforced for years until repealed by some far sighted solon for personal or business reasons.

In order to accomplish efficient work it is necessary that the members of the lower house unite in selecting a speaker who is capable of preventing the accumulation of bills on the general file. A good speaker in the chair can keep the work up to date, no matter how many green hands form the membership of the body, while a poor official can assist and retard the work from the start until in the closing days a hopeless mass of bills await passage.

George Cole of Manhattan, who is a candidate for speaker, is such a person who can be depended upon to keep the lawmakers on the jump from the start and it would be for the interests of the taxpayers that a united effort be made to secure his election. The advocacy of his candidacy is not being made by the Bonanza because Cole happens to be from Nye county, but with the belief that he is the best qualified of any candidate to expedite the business of the house.

If it's of exceptional value at the price, it's sure to be advertised in the Bonanza, else the merchant would be hopelessly unprogressive.

The man who ought to own it will come around and look over your property soon after you commence to advertise in the Bonanza.
